The European Golf Association would like to congratulate the top-three ranked players of the European Women's Amateur Golf Ranking, who receive formal recognition for their achievements in the form of an EGA medal. The final rankings were taken on Wednesday 7 October, following the end of the European Ladies' Amateur Championship (in the absence of a European Tour Qualifying School this year).

INGRID LINDBLAD, the European Women's Amateur Golf Ranking gold medal recipient, started her 2019/2020 campaign in good stead after she won the Annika Invitational USA presented by Rolex in early 2019 and contributed to the Swedish team success in the European Ladies' Team Championship played in Italy. She enjoyed a strong US college fall season with five top-fives, including wins at the Magnolia Invitational and the Florida State Match Up. In Europe, Lindblad added two top-fives and two wins at home at professional events with the Didrikson Skaftö Open and the Golfhaftet Masters before helping Sweden win the European Ladies' Team Championship Trophy last month for the third time in a row.

PAULINE ROUSSIN-BOUCHARD receives the silver medal. After international wins in Portugal and Italy in early 2019, the French team member contributed to the Continental Team victory in the Vagliano Trophy played at Royal St George's Golf Club. Roussin-Bouchard's form extended into the 2020 season after her success in the Windy City Collegiate Championship. She secured two additional podiums and reached the summit of women's amateur golf. Pauline spent 34 weeks on top of the World Amateur Golf Ranking from January to September 2020. More recently, she added three podium finishes throughout Europe during the summer before recording the best individual score in the European Ladies' Amateur Team Championship qualification.

LINN GRANT is awarded the bronze medal. In 2019, the Swede reached the semi-finals at the Women's Amateur Championship and was part of the Vagliano Trophy winning team. The same year, she helped her home team win the European Ladies' Team Championship and finished in the top-five of the European Ladies' Amateur Championship. After a succession of top-ten finishes, Grant earned her first collegiate individual title at the Dr. Donnis Thompson Invitational in early 2020. On return to Sweden, she won the GolfUppsala Open and collected four top-five places before helping her teammates retain the European Ladies' Team Champion title for the third year in row. Finally, Grant placed sixth in the European Ladies' Amateur Championship, the final counting event of this year's ranking.
